This is the story of student's making a difference in a part of the world that others have forgotten.

Building A Children's Hospital at Myende Landing, Uganda, Africa

Thinking outside the box and using their skills, knowledge, research, and creativity, the students' of American Heritage School/Delray have formed a student's steering committee in conjunction with a parent steering committee in an effort to save the lives of mothers and children.

The students, in addition to raising funds in creative projects, have additionally developed a program connecting to the Myende Landing people and specifically the mothers and children. In addition to building the hospital and encouraging others to participate and continue this effort, the students are outreaching to the community. Our eventual goal is to help the people help themselves in building a better, kinder, compassionate world.
